

PSYCHOLOGY MAJOR

The psychology major is designed to provide an understanding and perspective of professional psychology as well as the challenges and problems of living. The major is a foundational study for graduate school and for everyday life.

Program Outcomes:

Students completing a Bachelor of Arts degree in Psychology will be able to:

- compare favorably with students in similar programs
- evaluate scientific philosophies and theories within a Christian framework
- integrate Christian and psychological perspectives
- apply scientific concepts and analyses to psychological problems and employ problem-solving skills to specific psychological phenomena/situations
- evaluate research methods including design, statistical analysis, and psychometric methods
- think scientifically, distinguishing observations from conclusions as well as theories and findings based upon evidence from those without such support
- relate the study of psychology to contemporary society, making a significant contribution to church and community
- identify with and become actively involved in psychology focused activities
- explore inherent tensions in social science and psychology as it relates to theology and their experience of faith

Requirements total 48 hours. This includes 27 from required psychology courses and 21 hours of psychology electives. At least one credit hour of experiential education must be taken (PSY 345, PSY 445, or PSY 470X) if not completed in another department. Up to seven of the required hours may be used to meet general education requirements.

Organizational Leadership Emphasis

Course selections must include 18 hours from the Organizational Leadership Emphasis as part of the 48 hour requirement for the psychology major.

The Organizational Leadership Emphasis (OLE) is an emphasis within the psychology major that has been created for qualified students who seek to grow in the servant leadership of others across broad contexts.

With a dual emphasis on both theory and practice the OLE gives students an opportunity to develop and refine their philosophy of leadership as well as test it in the real world. Students are prepared for an organizational leadership practicum by gaining exposure to a variety of courses that systematically equip them to be successful as servant leaders.

The Leadership Minor (LM - 24 hours) is open to any student who wishes to go beyond the Organizational Leadership Emphasis (OLE) and must choose either the OLE in the psychology major or choose the Leadership Minor (see details in the catalog), but not both.

Psychology courses (PSY prefix) used in the Leadership Minor count directly towards the requirements for the psychology major.
